Dear Mr. Smith:

It is always gratifying to receive requests from groups such as the National Classification Management Society (NCMS) asking us to provide speakers to address security related issues. I find it encouraging that you and other managers in both industry and government share our concern and are interested in security education programs.

Unfortunately, [redacted] will not be available to address the NCMS meeting on 11 January 1982. As you are aware, the Federal Bureau of Investigation has purview over all counterintelligence activities in the United States. Since [redacted] briefing touches on this subject, we limit attendance to this presentation to our own employees and to employees of firms with whom we are contractually associated.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has an excellent activity known as the Development of Counterintelligence Awareness Program (DECA) which they present to both government industrial contractors and government employee groups. I highly recommend this program. You may wish to contact Mr. Edward J. O'Malley, Assistant Director, Intelligence Division, concerning the possibility of obtaining a speaker for the NCMS meeting in January.

I regret that we are unable to accept your invitation and [redacted] and I both wish to thank you for your comments regarding his presentation. Again, I recommend the FBI's DECA Program to you as a very appropriate alternative.

Sincerely,
